Career Assessment & Empowerment

Before you can figure out what job is right for you, you need to figure out who you are. Yes, it's a big question but the more you analyze and assess now, the more happiness and success you'll have down the road. There are thousands of resources to help you dig down to find who you are and what you're passionate about. And with today's economy, job development and support groups that provide huge networking opportunities are popping up all over town. Below is a list of links to help you get started on your journey. Once you've made it through the gates, visit our commute section for travel options around the Bay Area to help you get to your interviews and to work.

Assess and Build Your Skills

Today's job market requires today's skills. You don't need a Master's, or even a college degree, although if you are considering going back to school, education opens up many doors. But what you will need is a practical approach to your skills – are they realistic to the job within your sights? Your ability to read, write, and communicate clearly is not only crucial; it will give you the edge when it comes to getting the coveted second interview, and ultimately the job offer.

Reading, Writing, and Communication Skills

Free Spelling	Worksheets – learn, refine, test yourself!
Grammar & Writing	Tests and Tips
Spelling City	More spelling help
Dictionary	Find your words and learn their meaning

Computer Skills

Cover Letters and Resumes

There are four essential elements to good resumes and cover letters: be concise, be truthful, be appropriate, and be clear. Let a little of your personality shine through but don't forget that "less is always more". Before you sit down and write your resume and corresponding cover letter, remember that the resume should be factual about you, "the product", and a cover letter should be intriguing enough to open the door.

Resume Hints:

*Keep it organized, brief and factual: emphasize appropriate accomplishments, but do not change titles, salary, period of employment, supervisor information.
Goals/Objectives are tough to describe in a resume – it's better to have goals clearly in mind and cover this ground in the interview.
References should be available on request.*

Cover Letter Hints:

*Write respectfully. While it's best to write to a specific person when submitting a cover letter, sometimes this information is hard to find. In cases like this, think broadly: "Dear Selection Panel", "Dear Search Team", or "Dear Interviewing Board" are options. The same applies for emails.
Do not list every task you've completed. Broad descriptions are better because they lead to a discussion of your transferable skills.
A brief statement talking about your ability to learn new things and acquire new skills is INVALUABLE.*

San Francisco has a myriad of internship and educational opportunities to encourage local youth to learn and grow in the City. TMASF Connects provides resources to help you learn about financial assistance, scholarships, education, local job opportunities, and more. No matter what stage you are in your education, we have resources for you!

We have decided to streamline and simplify the scholarship resources we share in an effort to be inclusive and promote scholarship opportunities open to everyone. At this time, we are not promoting any exclusive scholarships.

The first scholarship resource we are listing is from the US Department of Education and offers tools for finding scholarships, applying, exploring careers, and more. Please click here to learn more.

The two resources below list thousands of scholarship opportunities:

Employers

One of the greatest resources in San Francisco is its workforce and TMASF Connects works to bring this workforce together. Our goal is to offer San Francisco residents a single resource for everything work-related: from finding the right job to finding the right employees for your company, from improving yourself to improving your bottom line, from understanding your paycheck to understanding your taxes, and beyond. In this section, we provide a myriad of resources from starting a business to hiring employees and beyond. Our goal is to provide a place where business owners find useful links to help keep the wheels of business turning.

Local, State, and Federal Resources

Local Links for Business Owners

San Francisco wants your business. And the City offers unique opportunities, credits and incentives to attract your business. Below are links to help you learn about “only-in- San Francisco” opportunities for business and how to take advantage of the City's unique offerings.

State Links for Business Owners

Welcome to California. Business leaders in the Golden State need to have a voice, and a roadmap to the issues that affect them – important matters such as health care, workers' compensation and business taxes. They need to know what and how policies and legislation affect businesses large and small, what products and services are available, all applicable labor laws and much more. On the next page is a list of helpful links to encourage business in California.

These federal links offer information on almost every aspect of business and are geared toward big business leaders and small business owners alike. Learn about energy issues, agricultural, environmental, defense, science and technology, international trade, taxes, economic and demographic data, financial assistance, business plans, selling to the government and much, much more.

Everything you need on the business continuum – how to start a business, how to grow a business and how to close a business. Information, regulations, and guidelines – it's all here.

Hiring Resources

San Francisco offers a myriad of civic organizations, religious groups and specialized training programs that work together to keep San Francisco's unique pool of local talent working locally. We're proud to be part of that effort and to provide a place where job seekers find the map to the perfect job and where business owners find useful links to help keep the wheels of business turning.

Hiring the right people is a crucial step in building a better business. San Francisco offers many social, civic, faith-based government and private agencies/associations dedicated to promoting local talent. Check out the links provided below.
